White Man's Burden On Asia

When we commented the other day on Gen. Van Fleet's praise of the Republic of Korea in the stepped-up action of the Korean war, we should have noted another item in his remarks.

He said the fighting ability of the enemy also had improved; that the Chinese also had learned to use western weapons and tactics. This is a development certain to have powerful repercussions in years to come.

The white man's burden used to mean the responsibility of the colonial powers for their backward brothers in the Orient.

In the future, "white man's burden" may be used to describe the burden of mechanized militarism which white man have placed on the backs of their Oriental brothers.

The Japanese were the first to bear it. They compounded their misery by starting a war they could not win.

When we called the newly-efficient ROK troops "brothers-in-arms" in the Korean war, we should have acknowledged they have become brothers-in-burden-bearing, too. Gone forever in Asia are the days when a horde of men armed with a rifle apiece and a belt of ammunition constituted an army.

No One Wins A Mud Battle

Harry Truman and the cynics whooping it up for his mastery of mud-slinging have given the Eisenhower campaign some bad moments.

Dwight Eisenhower is not equipped to sling mud. When he has been tempied to monkey with it, he has been awkward and out of

His advisers are wondering if he shouldn't end his campaign on a note of statesmanship, leaving all the mud-slinging act to the opposition. They suspect that voters who feel needled up after listening to a Truman tirade would not vote for Dwight Eisenhower anyway. They suspect the tirades have alienated many voters weary of courthouse politics in federal govern-

There is one more thing he must have observed by this time-that politicians under fire rise and sink to their natural levels, thereby revealing their stature or the lack of it.

Harry Truman has revealed what kind of a politician he is at heart. So has Adlai Stevenson, with his capitulation of the Truman line. Gov. Stevenson has sunk to the occasion, instead of

He said that he based his prediction on samplings in key districts of the country, which he said showed "an amazing" shift to Ike of voters who voted for President Truman in 1948.

The percentage of improvement in these districts, he said, showed a 12 to 13 per cent shift to the Republicans over the GOP percentage of 1948.

"Even if only one-half of this percentage of improvement is added to the Republican column, Eisenhower still can capture 10 states more than necessary to win the election," Hurja said.

He predicted that the states which Eisenhower would carry would give the Republicans anywhere from 30 to 35 states in the

If 35 states go to Ike, Hurja predicted that it would mean a whopping electoral majority of 380 for Eisenhower. If 30 states go to him, it would mean a GOP victory by 345 electoral votes.

Hurja said that the underlying reason for this shift of voters, which he said he had noted, was the basic "desire for a change."

Hurja said that it accounted for the record registrations in various parts of the country. He explained that the huge registrations indicat. ed that the people were set to vote for a change.

Helping The Script

Reports persist that Humphrey Bogart will play the lead in Hemingway's "The Old Man and the Sea," and what puzzles us is how Hollywood will rewrite it to get a "chick" into the story, a "must" with Humphrey on land or sea. In the Hemingway yarn no female intrudes. The love interest involves the passion of an old fisherman for his calling and his affection for a brave boy. Hollywood will, we assume, take the boy out and substitute a gal, perhaps a sultry doll from a fishing village who gives the old man more trouble than the sharks. Or it may rewrite the yarn so the dame falls off a yacht to elude a millionaire heel. The current carries her to the fisherman's dory . . . just as she is exhausted she manages to grab hold of the big marlin bound to the boatside . . The old man, who has been fighting off sharks all night, feels another tug . . . He looks and discovers the sweetie pie, Dolores.

Dazed, he starts to beat her with an oar ... She screams . . . He has been through so much that it would not even amaze him to hear a fish scream, so he continues to beat her off. "Please!" cries Dolores, "you don't know what you're doing!" "This is a fine time to tell me," says the old man. "I'm cold, hungry and exhausted," pleads

"If you're cold, hungry and exhausted what shape do you think I'm in?" replies the fisherman. "What are you hanging onto that fish

"It's Friday," she says limply. "There's nothing left of that fish. The sharks have been dining on him since Tuesday," says the old man.

"Take me aboard," she pleads. "I came out here for fish, not chicken," he snaps. (The old man is weak, but he is no fool.)

"Please! Please save me," she beseeches, "I am young and beautiful."

"I am a fisherman, not a talent scout," he

"No," she replies,

"Tennis, anyone?" he asks. "But you haven't a net," she says. "If I ever needed one it was on this trip," he says meditating on the fact the fishing journey has been a total loss. "What makes you so determined to get into this boat?"

"All my life I have wanted to figure in a Hemingway thriller," the girl confesses. Now comes the big display of Bogart gellantry. "I can't take you into the boat, as there is so little room," he says. "But I will get into the ocean with you!" "That's silly." says Dolores. "If you think that's silly you should have seen me in 'African Queen' with Kate Hepburn says Bogart. Casey Stengel has signed at a salary that may amount on a six-months-a-year basis to almost $600 a day . . . Is that a salary or a double steal? . . . It should inspire a new poem, "Casey at the Bank." ... Truman is on a whistle-stop tour of New England . . . There's a Truman Street in New Haven which can please him, but what about the Hotel Taft? . . . In Harry's present blockbusting mood we suggest stops at Killingly, Madison, Poundridge and Rockville in Connecticut . . . (And in Vermont let's have a speech at Bellows Falls.) John L. Lewis has come out for Adlai and will throw both eyebrows into the fight Maybe Lewis has heard Adlai in his lighter mood spring the gag line, "I don't dig it."

Large Crowds Greet Him In New England

ABOARD TRUMAN TRAIN (#)-President Truman pushed his drive for Democratic votes in New England with increasing intensity today after denouncing criticism of his administration as "misrepresentation" and "so many lies."

Encouraged by large and friendly crowds in Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Hampshire, he set up another heavy schedule of talks taking him into Boston for a major speech at 9:30 p.m., EST, in Symphony Hall.

The President drew about 50,000 in Hartford, capital city of Connecticut; 10,000 each in the Massachusetts cities of Worcester and Springfield; and police estimated 25,000 cheered him on his way through the streets of Manchester, N. H.

Truman chose Clinton, Mass., home town of his appointments secretary, Matthew J. Connelly, where thousands turned out along the railroad track, to give a rundown last night of members of his Cabinet and other top officers.

Taft Predicts Ike's Election

Becomes Convinced Of General's Popularity

WASHINGTON (P)—Sen. Robert A. Taft said today he has found "the great majority of the people really do 'like Ike' " and predicted Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower would win the election.

The Ohio senator, who was Eisenhower's chief rival for the Republican presidential nomination, said that after three weeks of campaigning he had become convinced Eisenhower's "very wide personal popularity" would be a key factor in a GOP triumph.

Writing in Pathfinder magazine,
Taft said that if Eisenhower wins,
"he will carry with him both the House and Senate."

The Senate race will be close, the Ohioan added, but an Eisenhower victory probably would mean the Republicans would pick up nine seats there and that this would offset some probable losses. The present Senate lineup is 49

Democrats to 47 Republicans.

Taft said he had not campaigned in the East at the time he wrote the article. But he predicted the GOP would carry New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut and Maryland.

He added, however, that Eisenhower could win without New York "particularly if he can add Virginia, Tennessee and Texas to his column, which I believe to be very likely."

Taft said an important Eisenhowever asset was that he started the campaign "without any enemies, and without having given offense to any large section of the people because he has not had to take a position on many domestic controversial issues during the past 10 years."

Taft wrote that "the main reason which makes me feel confident of a Republican victory is the deep-seated resentment against the Truman administration and all its works."

Gov. Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic presidential nominee, "has certainly not satisfied the nation that he will do more than follow the Truman policies," Taft said.

·Drop Kitchen Sink

TOKYO (P)—This time they hit em with everything—including the kitchen sink.

The Navy said Lt. Carl B. Austin of Woodburn, Ore., a pilot aboard the aircraft carrier Princeton, recently attached a sink to a 1,000-pound bomb and dropped it on a major North Korean city.

"I wasn't able to see what damage the sink caused," Austin sald, "but I guess the Reds can take the hint that we mean business."
